THE LIFE WE TRACE

How broad is time: or dull or sage upon its page
We trace our lives.

We pass away; it matters not, though soon forgot;
What's writ survives.

Make a new stroke; whate'er you do, be firm, be true,
And have no fears.

The curve you make, your friend essays; and in life's maze
It re-appears.

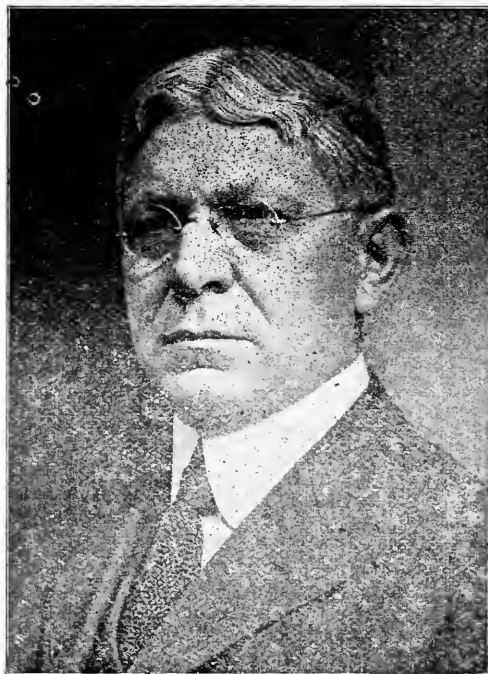

Write not amiss; some one in turn, tracing will learn
From thy life's lore.

In lines of beauty, then, behold in other mold
Thy life lived o'er.

—Carrie Matthews, '92

This poem of Miss Matthews' appeared in the O. U. Athena of '92. We deem it quite fitting that it should reappear in the number of the Alumni Bulletin that announces her passing. It was read by Mrs. Edith Woodruff Sayre, '88, on Alumni Day as the report of the special committee on the death of Miss Matthews.

Ohio University's President

Dr. Elmer Burritt Bryan

The election of Dr. Elmer Burritt Bryan as President of the Ohio University brings to the institution an executive who is widely known and highly respected by reason of his scholarship, administrative ability, and force of character. In the new President will be found a leader whose alert and trained intellect, winsome and yet vigorous personality and thorough understanding of present day educational needs will win an enthusiastic following from students, faculty and trustees. Under the inspiring and thoroughgoing leadership of President Bryan, the Ohio University is sure to make rapid progress towards larger and better things in higher education. Every phase of the work carried on by the University will feel the influence of an administrator in whose character are embodied the basic elements of sound culture and true manliness.

President Bryan comes to his new position with an equipment that qualifies him in an exceptional degree for the duties that he has assumed. As an educational administrator, a university president should understand not only the immediate problems of higher education but should also have a clear vision of the needs of the educational system of the entire nation. In this respect there is no man in the college world who has a better preparation for making an institution like the Ohio University an inspiring, unifying, and correlating influence in every field of public education in the state and nation than President Bryan is conceded to have. Because of the profound understanding he has of the whole field of educational work, the public schools of Ohio will not be long in feeling the impulse of a university administrator who knows intimately what can be done by means of the right kind of teacher-training to make these schools a vitalizing and enriching influence in the life of the American people.

A brief glance at Dr. Bryan's training and experience shows how fortunate the trustees of the Ohio University have been in their choice of a President for the state-supported institution that is designed to contribute to the educational betterment of the entire state. In 1889 he graduated from the Indiana State Normal School, always recognized as one of the best schools of the kind in the United States. Four years later he graduated from Indiana State University. After several years spent in teaching, he gave two years at Harvard and Clark Universities to post-graduate studies. He is one of the young men trained at Clark University who have rendered conspicuously valuable service to American education in normal and college education.

Dr. Bryan's teaching experience ranges from the district school to the university professorship. He has taught Social and Educational Science in Butler College and Pedagogy and Educational and Social Psychology in Indiana State University.

In his administrative activities he has even wider experience. He has been a high school principal and for two years he was principal of the Insular Normal School in the Philippine Islands. For four years he was president of Franklin College, from which institution he was called to the Presidency of Colgate University in 1909. His work at Colgate has placed President Bryan in the front rank of university administrators.

Dr. Bryan's entire career has been toward larger and better things. He comes to O. U. prepared to give the superb service that his broad and thorough training and his ripe experience have fitted him to render. Under his guidance the old college will stand for what is finest and best in scholarship, conduct and character. The enrichment of human personality will be the chief aim of college training as shaped by Dr. Bryan.

In Dr. Bryan, the faculty will find a man appreciative of scholarship and culture, always open-minded in dealing with all questions on which differences of opinion are likely, but never without a clearly defined policy and resolute independence when de-isions are to be made. A straightforward and manly policy in considering all administrative questions will characterize the new President. His high character, judicial temperament and respect for the scholarly aims will gain the fullest confidence of the teaching force of the institution.

The action of the trustees in calling to the presidency a man like Elmer Burritt Bryan gives every graduate and well-wisher of the Ohio University reason for large hopefulness and splendid faith in the future of the institution that we all love. Under his guidance the college will fill more adequately than ever before its opportunity.

PRESIDENT BRYAN'S RESPONSE

Athens, Ohio, July 6, 1921

Dr. Clement L. Martzoff,

Athens, Ohio.

My dear Dr. Martzoff:

I have your communication of June 17th carrying resolutions from the Ohio University Alumni Association under the date of June 15th. May I ask you to convey to the members of this Association my heartiest thanks for this action and assure them that it gives me added courage to undertake the great work which is so near and dear to every member of the association?

The traditions of the Ohio University are the very best and give the incoming administration an exceptionally fine background for the work ahead. Knowing nothing but the advancement of the welfare of the University, the alumni, faculty, trustees, and the student body, working in co-operation, may we hope to carry forward the achievements of the past hundred years to even greater heights and wider usefulness.

Sincerely yours,

Elmer Burritt Bryan

COLGATE'S TRIBUTE TO OUR NEW PRESIDENT

ELMER BURRITT BRYAN

The resignation of President E. B. Bryan comes to the attention of Colgate men as one of the greatest surprises and disappointments of many a college generation. Coming as it does during the critical period of readjustment and reconstruction, this loss is keenly felt among both undergrads and alumni.

During the past two decades, Alma Mater has arisen from almost utter obscurity to a most prominent position among the educational institutions of the nation. No small portion of this phenomenal success has been realized under the administration of President Bryan. His conscientious and tireless efforts have been large factors in the upbuilding of the "Greater Colgate."

Not only in the material development of Colgate has President Bryan's influence been a telling factor—the spiritual side has also profited. For twelve years his personal association with students has been an inspiration for greater service. He has been a worthy leader and example. Guided by a sincere appreciation of human nature and a profound sense of justice, his conduct in the administration of affairs at Colgate has brought forth the worthiest commendation on the part of the entire student body. His life has been an inspiration to us. We are better men for having lived with him on the Colgate campus.

Although we are loath to give up what we have valued most at Colgate, we are prompted by the spirit of unselfishness to realize that the needs of the world extend beyond our narrow horizon.

What President Bryan has meant to us can never be forgotten. We can barely realize what his faithful services have done for Alma Mater. Yet we rejoice in the hope that he may be of even greater service to others in similar walks of life. Our good wishes for continued success go with him to his new field of service.

THE BULLETIN TOO SMALL

It is a matter of regret to the Editor to find such a mass of unused, but most interesting material remaining after the matter contained in this number of the Bulletin is ready for the printer. However, this is no new experience. It occurs every month—only there is more of it this time. In fact it seems to be on the increase.

It was a fine provision for the Board of Control to order an increase in the number of pages for next year. Beginning with the October number, our promise is out—our Alumni friends may expect a decided improvement in the Bulletin.

This lack of space also precludes our giving the list of those who have "come across" since January 26. If those who are herein included wish to know if their money has been credited will drop the office a line to that effect, a proper receipt will be forwarded.

May we not ask you to see to it that any change of address be reported to the office punctually? Do not forget it.

The Secretary personally expresses his appreciation of the splendid support given by the hundreds of Alumni during the year. If his efforts have in some measure met with the approval of the friends of Alma Mater, he is glad to have served.

Commencement Week

Commencement Week this year did not bring as many of the "old grads" as formerly. This can be accounted for in part by the fact that no special effort had been made to induce our Alumni friends to return, together with the increased "high cost of travel." Nevertheless the exercises were interesting throughout and everything was conducted on the plane consistent with the dignity due to academic events.

The program of the week began on Sunday morning, when Dr. Shailer Mathews, of the Chicago Divinity School, gave the Baccalaureate Address. His subject was "The Validity of American Ideals." The Annual Sermon was delivered in the evening by Dr. Walter E. Burnett, of Columbus.

On Monday evening the Department of Public Speaking presented the Annual College Play, Ibsen's "A Doll's House," with Mary Tener as star—and a most creditable performance it was.

Tuesday was Senior Day, with class exercises, class breakfast, President's reception, etc., as the main events. The day closed by the College of Music giving its recital to a most appreciative audience.

Wednesday was Alumni Day, filled morning, noon and night with reunions, get-togethers, banquets, programs and the annual Alumni-Varsity game.

The day opened with a goodly crowd assembled to observe what has come to be known on the campus as Alumni Chapel. Samuel L. McCune, President of the Association, presided. What has come to be a most interesting feature of this meeting is the initiation of the graduating class into the class of Alumni. In carrying this out, Dean E. W. Chubb, the Class Professor for 1921, in a few fitting words presented the more than two hundred people to the officers of the Alumni Association. They were received by Elizabeth G. Beatty, '17, of Athens, on the part of the Association. Then followed the "charge," a clever and interesting speech which will appear in the October number of the Bulletin. The class responded through Miss Waltha Keck, vice-president of the class, in a most fitting and happy manner.

Then followed the annual business meeting. Reports of various committees were made and acted upon as herewith given. One of the most important of these was on the new constitution, which makes some essential changes in the administration of the Association.

Other reports came from the Auditing Committee, the Committee on Necrology, the Dafydd J. Evans Latin Prize Fund and Carrie A. Mathews Memorial Committees, and the Resolutions Committee on the coming of President Bryan. Among the other interesting features was the reading of the letter from Prof. D. J. Evans, by Prof. F. S. Coultrap. The musical part of the program was arranged by Prof. T. N. Hoover.

In the afternoon the newly elected Board of Control held its first meeting in the Alumni office. The minutes of this meeting follow:

The Board of Control of the Alumni Association held its first meeting in the office of the Alumni Secretary on Wednesday, June 15, 1921, at 1:30 P. M.

The following members were present: Samuel L. McCune, '96, Cleveland, President of the Alumni Association; C. L. Martzloff, '07, Secretary; Mrs. Nelle Alderman Munslow, Mus. '09, from the Steubenville chapter; Harry C. Wilson, '15, from the Huntington chapter; T. W. Craig, representing the Athens chapter; Louise Price, '12, from the Cincinnati chapter; Don McVay, '15, from the Columbus chapter, and Darrell Moore, '16, from the chapter of the Class of 1916.

Mr. McCune was made chairman and Louise Price, secretary pro tem.

The Board proceeded at once to the election of the permanent officers of the Association, which resulted in the selection of James P. Wood, '03, Cleveland, Ohio, President; Carl D. Sheppard '02, Akron, Ohio, Vice-President; C. L. Martzloff, '07, Athens, Secretary; Julia L. Cable, '19, Athens, Assistant Secretary; Joshua R. Morton, '05, Treasurer, Athens.

For the Executive Committee, the following were elected: F. D. Forsyth, '11, Athens; Mary Townsend Porter, '02, Athens; and John F.

Laird, '81, Parkersburg, W. Va.

The Board then proceeded to outline tentatively the year's program: first, that the Executive Committee be authorized by the Board of Control to make the Alumni Bulletin a larger and more attractive sheet.

Second, that a proposition be submitted to the President of the University for the publication of a complete Alumni Roster; that the college be asked to guarantee a sum of money sufficient to publish the book, to be superintended by the Alumni Association; that beginning with July 1, 1921, an addition of $10 per month be made to the salary of the Assistant Secretary.

The ball game between the Varsity and the Alumni resulted in favor of the Varsity to a score, which, out of respect to the stars of other days, had better remain unmentioned.

The Annual Alumni Dinner which for years has been a prominent feature of Alumni Day, was up to its usual standard of excellence. The program is here given:

Miss Kurtz's subject was "The Evolving World." It was a most carefully prepared address. The content was on a high plane and well befitted an academic occasion. However, the "proof of the pudding is in the eating thereof." We will let our readers determine its excellencies for themselves by publishing the address in its entirety in the October number of the Bulletin.

Beside the regular toasts, which were uniformly good, spurred on by the keen-edged toast-master, the guests listened to an amusing recital by Rev. Hutsinpillar of a one-time bombastic speech that had been actually delivered in Athens more than half a century ago. To add to the enjoyment of the evening, "Ed" McWilliams was present with his inimitable fancy "hits," which have placed him among the stars on the vaudeville stage. His stunts provoked just one applause and that lasted from the beginning to the end, a continuous scream.

The concluding exercises came on Thursday morning, when Acting President Chubb, assisted by Deans and Heads of Departments, presented the diplomas. No annual address, unless that given by the Acting President might be so regarded, was given.

All in all, the week was marked by the simplicity of the exercises and the high plane and dignity with which the various functions were carried on.

President Bryan visited on the campus one day to confer with the Board of Trustees but returned at once to Colgate to complete his duties there.

The Dafydd J. Evans Latin Prize Fund

Athens, Ohio, June 12, 1921

We come today to bring you a gift. Ohio remembers her Grand Old Man.

Dear Teacher and Friend:

Some weeks ago at the suggestion of Dr. Martzoff, a committee was appointed to make on behalf of the Faculty and Alumni of Ohio University, some fitting expression of congratulation and love, on the completion of your half century here.

We sought some kind of recognition in perpetuity; for man instinctively strives to pass on his loves to the unborn. Our choice was not easy; for how can a life-work which is of the spirit only be commemorated? How otherwise than by tablets built in human hearts? You are a handicraftsman of souls. No futile marble, or corroding brass; nothing to be measured, weighed, held in the hand, seemed an adequate memorial of you.

Therefore it was decided to establish a perennial award to be known as The Dafydd J. Evans Latin Prize to be given yearly by the Latin Department. A fund of $500.00 will be raised for the purpose. This sum will become part of the irreducible debt of the state, yielding interest annually.

So we have dreamed that while generation after generation labors and passes on to the invisible, students of O. U. will still walk with you in the sunny Sabine grove, or hear the thundering philippics in the Roman Forum, or watch by Dido's pyre. Orators and poets-to-be, still under your spell, will learn their own charming tongue through the medium of that dead language which it was your joy to make live again.

And when commencement times come round, poignant with farewells as of old, there will always be memories of you. We do not say goodbye. We do not mean goodbye; for who knows but that all human farewells are a bad dream only? With us who have known your kindly presence, will remain precious memories of communion in classroom, in hall, in library. With those who come after, as long as the word "Ohio" means anything on the lips of the dwellers between the Blue Lake and the Beautiful River, your name will be spoken with reverence.

DR. EVANS' LETTER TO THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Fellow Alumni of Ohio University:

While I grieve because I am too ill to attend Alumni Chapel and listen to the messages you will bring to us, yet it gives me joy to realize that I have lived to see the fiftieth anniversary of one of the great days of my life, when I made my graduating address and received my A. B. degree. In those days the University conferred two grades of Baccalaureate degrees: the B. A. and the B. S. The course leading to the B. S. was shorter than the course leading to the B. A.

There were six in my class and our places on the program were selected by the faculty by lot. The first to speak was A. J. Michael; his subject was "Evolution." He was the largest, best dressed, jolliest man of the class.

The second speaker was Thomas Blackstone. His theme was "Might and Right." These two men were Betas.

The third to address the audience was W. D. Lash, a brother of the best lady in Athens and one of the truest men I ever knew. His topic was "Mind and Mystery."

The fourth to entertain us was H. W. Coultrap, one of our present Board of Trustees. His subject was "The Plea of Expediency." The next member to appear was J. W. Rutledge. His theme was "Growth and Decay." The last was D. J. Evans, and my address was the counsel of "Do What You Can."

Mr. Coultrap was a Phi Delta Theta. The other three of us were Delta Tau Deltas.

Michael and Coultrap became lawyers; Blackstone and Rutledge physicians; Lash and I, teachers. He was superintendent of the Zanesville city schools thirty-one years after completing five years in the high school.

Mr. Coultrap and I are the only members of the class that are living.

Two years following my graduation I superintended town schools. In 1873 I was elected to a position in a college in Indiana, which I filled for seven years. The next two years I was principal of a Young Ladies Seminary in Zanesville, Ohio. This brings me down to 1882 when I was made Professor of Latin in the Ohio University, which I held for thirty-nine years. This briefly has been my life as an alumnus. Before I graduated I had taught for four years in district and village schools, making in all fifty-four years as a teacher.

From my eighteenth year I have been a teacher except the four years I worked for my degree.

As I look back over my life I become conscious of many mistakes and some blunders I made. But at the time I felt that I was doing my best according to my best judgment. I have always been very fond of teaching and I am loath to give it up. It was always my disposition to manifest my interest in my students as individuals and thus, somehow, an atmosphere was created in which each student seemed to add as it were to the glory of the class.

When I was eleven years old I became alarmingly ill and my mother said to my father: "I am almost sure this boy is going to leave us." They had lost three boys. But my father in a cheerful voice said, "Oh, no, he is not going to die; he is going to grow up and go to college at Athens," and ever since the college at Athens has been, I may say, an object of affection with me.

In conclusion I say it is beyond me to find words fully adequate to express my gratitude for, and my appreciation of the kindness of the men who suggested the Latin Prize Fund and especially am I grateful also to those who so generously contributed the means. While I was at home all winter and spring, as it were, in a shadow, hidden from the notice of college activities, the plan for this fund clears away the gloom into the sunshine, that I shall still be a small factor in making scholarship one of the chief marks of the "College at Athens" and my good wishes for old O. U. and love for its Faculty, Alumni and students will last while my life lasts.
